

Growing Up in an Interfaith Family

A Rabbi's Reflections on Christmas and
Hanukkah
Sunday, Dec. 12 at 11 AM
In Person at BEKI

Raised in an interfaith and mixed-race family in Los Angeles, Rabbi Eric Woodward says he knows “what it’s like to feel on the margins.” His mother Lisa is an Ashkenazic Jew, and his father Michael was raised Catholic by his mother Maria who immigrated at the age of six to the U.S. from Oaxaca, a state in the south of Mexico.

Are you part of an interfaith family? Do you have questions or ideas to share with others about how to navigate the winter holidays? Please come and join the conversation. This will be a safe space for discussing the joys and difficulties of interfaith family life.

